EDITORIAL

We have tried to avoid succumbing to the natural tendency to over sentimentalize a graduation. But the dividing line between sentiment and deep regret is so finely drawn that we would be nothing but ingrates if we did not make public acknowledgement to those to whom we are indebted.

To our parents, to our teachers, to our principal, and to our friends, for their encouragement, help, and understanding, we give, most humbly, our sincerest thanks. Were it not for them, we should not be able to prove ourselves in the world of affairs.
